The REGISTER is indebted to the genial Mr. Crum, of the Murdock-Crum Co., Chicago, for two splendid maps—one of Iron county and the other of the City of Ironton. They are valuable and Mr. Crum has our sincere thanks. The Murdock-Crum Co. is the corporation that recently bought the Pilot Knob lands.

Thursday afternoon of last week Louis Pettana, employed in Newman's garden, viciously assaulted Glen Parten, fourteen years of age, who was also at work in the garden, hitting him a terrible blow over the left eye. Next day Pettana was arraigned before Squire Rasche who fined him $1 and costs. It occurs to us that the defendant may consider that he got off very light.

A Hungarian baby, 22 months old, was knocked off the railroad track at Pilot Knob Tuesday morning. Dr. Marshall, who was called, says he found the little one pretty badly bruised but, so far as he could see, with no fatal injuries. The train crew did not see the baby until after the engine had struck it. How the little thing escaped instant death seems miraculous.

Horace A. Smith, who lives west of town, thinks he has a bonanza on his farm, the old Elgan place. Our post-office was removed to its new location on the corner south of the REGISTER office Saturday night and mail was disbursed from there Sunday morning. The new fixtures are all right and the office presents a very neat appearance. One big improvement in the service is that you can get your mail any time of the day on Sunday or holidays, provided you rent a lock box. When the postmaster leaves the office, the front door remains open, and you can go in and get your mail.

Mrs. Eliza Santhuff was tried for slander in the Circuit Court here at the November term, 1906, and was fined five dollars. She then took her case to the St. Louis Court of Appeals, which sustained the decision of the lower court and upon refusal to pay the fine and cost, Judge Williams ordered Sheriff Fitts to convey her to the Iron County Jail to serve out the fine and cost, will amount to 22 1-2 days in jail. "Surely the way of the transgressor is hard." Later: Mrs. Santhuff paid the fine and cost. —Centerville Reformer.

His many friends here join the Tribune in wishing them most happiness. —Fredericktown Tribune.

Mr. Bye, an expert telephone man from Jackson, Mo., is now in charge of the local system, giving it a thorough overhauling. In rearranging the switch board he has found it unavoidably necessary to change the numbers of many of the phones; so, until the work of rearranging is completed, you are requested, when calling central, to give the name of the party you want to talk to, instead of the number. Bear in mind, however, that this practice will be but temporary. As soon as the rearrangement of the switch board is perfected and the new directory issued all calls to central for connection must be made by number.

Sheriff Fitts of Reynolds county arrived in Ironton last Friday morning with three prisoners: Frank Declore, James Miner and Lon Mueller. Declore was convicted of assault at the recent term of circuit court in Reynolds county and fined $100 and sentenced to three months in jail; he was also given a sentence of six months for jail breaking. Mueller is under a sentence of twelve months for larceny. James Miner is held on the charge of shooting his stepfather a few weeks ago. The late grand jury in Reynolds county, after examining the county jail, declared it unfit for use and recommended that no one should be confined in it for a longer time than thirty days.

Here is a story going the rounds of the southeast press: "Last summer while Wm. H. Burns, a locomotive engineer between Memphis and Poplar Bluff on the Iron Mountain railroad, was in New Mexico with his daughter, who was an invalid, he was induced to invest a few dollars in mining property, which had never been developed, says an exchange. He purchased a number of shares which were considered worthless and the transaction had long since passed out of his mind. This week he received information that the mine had turned out to be of immense value and was offered $68,000 in cash for his shares, which cost him comparatively but few cents. He has not yet accepted the offer."

Twelve members of the St. Louis Cycling Club arrived in Potosi about two o'clock last Saturday afternoon on their wheels, having pedaled from Hillsboro, where they left that morning at eight o'clock. They came through De Soto, Barytes and Old Mines. About 3 P. M. they stuck out again on the return trip, expecting to make Richwoods the same day where they would spend the night. They found the roads at this season pretty hard going but made the trip this far without a mishap. They reported having passed a large auto touring car headed this way and stuck in the mud back in Jefferson county. About five o'clock Saturday evening this car with five or six passengers, slid through town, en route to Ironton. With good roads from here to St. Louis Potosi would quickly become a popular point for bicycle and auto tourists. —Potosi Journal.

The transfer of 5,500 acres of iron lands known as the Romine tract, was made Saturday by S. M. Chapman and Ed. George to the Missouri Iron and Steel Company, of Boston, Mass., the consideration being $75,000. This deal was consummated by Mr. J. M. Elvins, of St. Francois county, who has been in Poplar Bluff for several weeks in connection with this and other land deals. The land sold Saturday is one-half mile from the Frisco Railroad and ten miles east of Poplar Bluff. We are informed that it is the purpose of the Boston company to immediately build a switch to their property and erect a smelter. Mr. Elvins tells the Citizen that this deal is only a starter in the direction of developing the iron industry in this section. It is probable that the Boston company, in addition to their holdings in Butler county, which amount to about 15,000 acres, will also absorb properties which have been offered them in Cape Girardeau and Wayne counties. —Citizen.

Some ten days ago the body of a woman was taken from the Mississippi river at Alton, Ill. All efforts to discover her identity have proven in vain. An examination revealed that death had been occasioned by a crushing blow on the skull. The authorities believe the woman was murdered, and have been endeavoring to fathom the mystery. A feature that gives local interest to the affair is that Coroner Streep of Alton last Friday received a letter signed "Rue Isaman, of Arcadia, Mo." The letter was in the handwriting of a woman who pretended to be a sister of the dead woman. The writer of the letter said the woman had been killed by a kick from a mule, and the body thrown in the river because of a lack of funds to pay for a burial. The corner puts little faith in the letter and thinks it was written to mislead him. One thing certain: there is no person by the name of "Rue Isaman" living at Arcadia, nor, so far as we have been able to ascertain, has there ever been. So that much of the letter, at least, is deceptive.

Last Friday at midnight the special train returning from St. Genevieve on the Illinois Southern from the Drummer's Convention, passed over Harry Rapp, who was lying asleep across the track near Reuter's mill midway of his body, almost severing it and killing him instantly. It appears that he and some other young men had been canning beer and drinking near the saloon close to the Flat River station of the Illinois Southern. About ten o'clock he and a young man named Joe Marlow started home and sat down on the track at the dirt crossing near Reuter's mill and fell asleep. When the special came along and slowed up at the crossing, Marlow got up in a dazed sleepy condition just before the train passed. After the train passed he took hold of Harry Rapp's leg and said "Get up, Harry, let's go home," when he discovered that Rapp had run over by the train and killed. Marlow went home, sat down on the side of his bed with his clothes on and fell asleep without telling anyone about the affair. At the coroner's inquest the next day he said he was with young Rapp, but didn't remember anything about how he was killed. The inquest was adjourned over to Tuesday morning and on Monday he told his father the story related above, and testified to the same before the coroner on Tuesday. He said he told the first story about not remembering anything of the circumstances for fear that he would be accused of being responsible in some way for his friend Rapp's death. —Farmington Times.

Liveryman Vance of Arcadia tells us that he came very near losing two horses in the Shut-In Ford Tuesday evening of last week. He had hired a team to Messrs. Morris and Constance, a couple of traveling men. They drove to Roselle on the St. Francis river in the afternoon and reached the Shut-In Ford on their way home about six o'clock. It had been raining but the men did not notice how the stream was swollen and plunged the team into the rushing waters. The water was swift and deep and immediately went rushing over the buggy seat. The horses batted manfully but by the time they reached midstream, the harness got tangled, all but one of the tugs were loosened from the single trees, and they could move the rig no farther. In the meantime the waters swept wildly through the buggy and the occupants yelled loudly for help. Will Sigman, who happened to be near, heard their cries, and he and some of the neighbors went to the rescue. A rope was secured, thrown to the men in the buggy, and they were in this way pulled to land. Of course they were wet to the skin, but what cared they for that? They considered their escape a lucky one, and were glad to get out with their lives! And two more thoroughly frightened men, it is said, you won't see in a life time! It is safe to wager that in future they'll be exceedingly careful how they drive into a mountain stream just following a big rain. They were at a loss, however, how to get the horses and buggy out of the water and went on to Arcadia and notified the livery man. He got a half-dozen men together and hurried to the Shut-In, where he found the team and rig just as the drummers had left them. Some one rode into the water, cut the one tug that held the horses to the rig, and they were soon got to land. Some ropes were used in pulling the buggy to shore. Nothing was missing and the rig suffered no damage except a broken single-tree. Mr. Vance tells us that the horses were in the stream about four hours, and all that time, with the avalanche of waters rushing round and about them they stood patiently awaiting for the relief that finally came.
